Description

Laboureur was born in Nantes in 1877. A painter, illustrator and print maker. He initially studied law in Paris but gave this up in favour of studying art at the Academie Julian. He became friendly with Toulouse-Latrec who helped him with his first lithographs. He then travelled to Germany and North America before taking a studio in Chelsea in 1907 where he worked for some year. On his return to France he first exhibited in Paris in 1911 and made his name as a pioneering avant garde print maker. He founded the group Les Peintres-Graveurs Independants and was one of the most successful and influential printmakers of his day. He was based in Paris but returned to London every year where he also owned a house.
